NOT A GOOD POLICY

Cable advices from Cherbourg are to the effect that the Leviathan reached that port with her store of medicinal liquor unbroken. In view Globe-Democrat. of the fact that liquor is easily obtainable there, there is little probability that her medicinal liquor was illegally used between that port and Scathampton, and thus all the talk about the possibility that the United States Lines, Inc., might lose their flagship as the result of seizure by store of liquors for medical purpose Dispatch. has been wasted.

That her new owners would take such a chance was unthinkable, considering the ease with which liquor can be taken aboard beyond the twelve-mile limit-a course the line will probably follow on the eastward veyages of their vessels in case they decide to make the plan of serving of liquor their policy.

National Commissioner Doran has stated that selling liquor on ships under the American flag is not unlawful unless liquor is unlawfully secured. If American vessels take liquer aboard after passing the twelve-mile limit on eastward trips and dispose of it before making that limit on westward trips, he holds, they are not without the law.

The misconception regarding this City Star. matter may have been due to the policy previously followed by vessels belonging to the government. While the course the new owners probably will follow could have been followed when the vessels were under government operation, President Harding thought it would be unseemly for a government which had gressmen who are accused of smugadopted prohibition to sell liquor on gling in whisky were merely envessels operated by it, and ordered Springfield News. that no liquor be sold on them.

But while the sale of liquor on American flag vessels may not be unlawful under the present laws, we can not help but feel that, aside from the moral phase of the thing it is bad policy

Operating dry vessels, the owner of the United States Lines, Inc. would receive, it is reasonable to assume, the bulk of the patronage of our dry citizenship. By selling liquor they can no longer hope to maintain that advantage, and will be compelled to compete with the vessels of all other nations for the patronage of those who feel that they must have their liquor. SENATE RULES.

"I do not know of a time that the country has ever been harmed by the death of a bill in a filibuster, says Senator Couzens, who is opposed to a revision of the senate rules to strengthen the hands of the majority against the obstruc-tive and dilatory tactics that now permit a determined minority to prevent the enactment of legislation that it regards as unsound.

The whole scheme of democratic government is built up on the assumption that the majority shall the Colina volcano followed by an rule. The majority is not always earthquake shock has spread terror right, as his country has learned to its discomfiture more than once in tants of nearby towns and villages. its comparatively short history; but its comparatively short history, one in the long run it is more likely to a good roads association with the give the people the kind of legislation they want than are small that vicinity. It is stated that the tion they want than are small groups of wilful men, who set themselves deliberately to the task of defeating the will of a majority of those electors who take sufficient interest in their government to go to the polls and vote.

Apparently Senator Couzens uses the word filibuster in the limited sense of a talking marathon direct ed against a particular legislative proposal. The term includes more than that. Any dilatory action by a minority to delay or defeat legisla-tion comes within its purpose and meaning. As the senate rules now stand, a minority may prevent a bill from reaching a vote by wast ing the senate's time talking for or against other measures; or it ma attain the same end by invoking an archaic rule governing the position of bills of the calendar.
